

Regarding, LPFMs and Translators: I wish that the rules would go back to disallowing translators from rebroadcasting from outside of their primary listening area. Too many translators are popping up in rural and urban areas where they cannot even be heard in their City of Licence -- which are being rebroadcast from 1000s of miles away. This is not in the Public Interest, Convenience or Necessity.

I would also suggest that, once analog TV sunsets, the the spectrum below 87.9 be opened up to radio broadcasting.
